1. Overview

Tony Cole, Esq., FCIArb is a globally recognized authority on international and domestic arbitration, with both a commercial and construction ADR practice, and a consumer, employment and education ADR practice. He has been a member of the New York State Bar for two decades and arbitrates both domestic and international disputes through JAMS' New York and London offices. Prior to joining JAMS, Tony worked as counsel at law firms in New York and Geneva, gaining particular experience in banking, finance and securities disputes, and incorporating a variety of commercial disputes and employment litigation. As an arbitrator he has built a diverse practice that ranges from general contractual/commercial disputes to specialized areas including construction, aviation, technology and intellectual property, as well as consumer and employment disputes. He has notable experience in disputes requiring the application of the law of multiple jurisdictions, being familiar with both common law and civil law systems, and having applied a range of laws including those of England and Wales, the United States (Federal and State), the European Union, China, Israel, Russia, India, among others, as well as international treaties. Most recently Tony has begun work on space law and artificial intelligence. He is an associate of the University of Leicester's Institute for Space, involved in the teaching of space law, and a member of Leicester Law School's Artificial Intelligence Working Group.

Tony is a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators (FCIArb) and is a former Chartered Institute of Arbitrators Branch Chair. He was a member of the International Chamber of Commerce's Task Force on Disability Inclusion and International Arbitration, which produced the 2023 ICC Guide on Disability Inclusion in International Arbitration and ADR. He has provided guidance on arbitration to the European Parliament of the European Union's Committee on Legal Affairs, and serves as mentor and trainer to new adjudicators beginning work on consumer disputes. Tony also has an active consumer, employment and education practice, regularly sitting as arbitrator in disputes of all sizes. He has experience with a wide range of consumer legislation across both the United States and the United Kingdom, teaches in the field and regularly trains and mentors individuals commencing work adjudicating consumer disputes. In his employment practice Tony benefits from an unusual background representing parties on both sides of employment and labor disputes. His education practice benefits from his longstanding involvement in universities, including deciding claims brought by students against faculty members relating to PhD supervision while Director of Post-Graduate Research for the University of Leicester's College of Social Sciences, Arts and Humanities, and his ongoing role as an adjudicator of complaints brought by schools against Ofsted, the governmental body responsible for inspecting and rating schools in England.
